UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA
SAN FRANCISCO DIVISION

Case No. 3:07-cv-06050-MEJ

ROSE HEFNER, et. al.

Plaintiffs,

v.

SMITHKLINE BEECHAM
CORPORATION
d/b/a GLAXOSMITHKLINE and
MCKESSON CORPORATION

Defendants

PLAINTIFF'S REPLY
BRIEF IN SUPPORT
OF MOTION
FOR REMAND

DATE: January 14, 2008
TIME: 2:00 p.m.
COURTROOM: 15
JUDGE: Magistrate Judge Maria-Elena James

Two issues emerge in Defendant SmithKline Beecham Corporation d/b/a GlaxoSmithKline's (hereinafter "GSK") Opposition to Plaintiff's Motion for Remand. First, is the misassumption that McKesson Corporation is fraudulently joined and thus federal jurisdiction will ultimately prevail. Second, and of primary importance in assessing the weight and credibility of Defendant's position, is the specious argument that judicial economy and efficiency will be served by deferring a ruling of the remand motion pending transfer to the Avandia MDL. In support of its

1 position, Defendant asks this Court to read and rely only on GSK's version of the law and ignore
2 the overwhelming authority to the contrary. Plaintiff respectfully asks the Court to perform a
3 detailed and thorough analysis of the issues and find that there is no federal jurisdiction and remand
4 this case to state court.

5 I. ARGUMENT

6 a. Economy, Efficiency, Fairness and Comity Favor Resolution of Federal 7 Jurisdiction in this Court. 8

9 In opposition to Plaintiff's Motion to Remand, Defendant reiterates much of the argument
10 initially raised in its Motion to Stay All Proceedings. The focus of this argument is judicial 11 economy and efficiency. Defendant argues that allowing the "transferee court to decide this and the 12 other pending Motions to Remand will conserve the resources of the Court, will ensure consistent
13 rulings, and will not prejudice the Plaintiff to any significant degree." See Def's Opp. at 3.
14 Defendant's assertion that this case should be stayed and issues pertaining to jurisdiction should be
15 decided in the federal MDL, ignores the pendency of state actions before this Court and contradicts
16 any argument relating to judicial economy and efficiency.

17 Currently, eight cases are set for the remand hearing before this Court on January 14, 2008.
18 None of the proceedings transferred to the Avandia MDL involve similar fraudulent joinder issues
19 and there is no hearing date for and pending motion. See (Exhibit A; Avandia MDL Docket Report).
20 GSK asks that this Court transfer these cases to another forum for additional briefing and an 21 uncertain hearing date only to face the likely possibility that the cases be remanded back to 22 California state court. As such, Defendant is merely attempting to delay merits based litigation by 23 having the issue of contested jurisdiction fester in the federal MDL. This tactic lacks substance and 24 meaningful logic and is directly at odds with the efficiency and economy argument GSK espouses

1 in opposing this Motion to Remand. Thus, Plaintiff respectfully requests that this Court rule on its
2 Remand Motion and deny GSK's Motion to Stay.

4 b. McKesson Corporation, as the Distributor of Avandia, is Liable for Plaintiff's
5 Injuries and Therefore is not a Fraudulently Joined Defendant.

7 McKesson Corporation is a sophisticated pharmaceutical distributor, in the direct chain of 8 distribution for Avandia, that knew or should have known of the dangers of Avandia and warned
9 Plaintiff and his physicians of those dangers. Plaintiff's allegation is that McKesson was actively
10 engaged in the distribution, marketing and promotion of Avandia and is not merely a clearinghouse
11 for the drug. c.f. Barth v. B.F. Goodrich Tire Co., 265 Cal.App.2d 228 (1st Dist. 1968).

12 What Plaintiff has placed before the Court is a basis for McKesson's liability. The activities
13 and overall knowledge of McKesson place it in a category beyond mere "distributor." Defendant
14 asserts that the allegations against McKesson are "generic" and "conclusory" in a desperate attempt 15 to convince this Court that there was fraudulent joinder. However, even a cursory review of 16 Plaintiff's complaint confirms that there are valid causes of action against McKesson for the 17 distribution and promotion of Avandia. See Aaroe v. Merck & Co., Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. Lexis
18 40744 (C.D. Cal. 2005) (finding the allegations that McKesson distributed the drug throughout the 19 country, Plaintiff ingested the drug, and McKesson knew or should have known of the tortuous
20 conduct, is sufficient to charge McKesson with the wrongful conduct). While Defendant's
21 arguments, if true, may provide some support for a summary judgment motion, it does nothing to 22 overcome the fact that Plaintiff has met the minimal threshold that there may be a sustainable claim
23 against McKesson that could be fleshed out in discovery. See Plute v. Roadway Package Sys., Inc.,
24 141 F. Supp. 2d 1005, 1008 (N.D. Cal. 2001). Further, issues regarding the sufficiency of a cause
25 of action due to inartful, ambiguous, or technically defective pleading must be resolved in the favor

1 of remand. Id. at 1008; See also Pelozza v. Capistrano Unified Sch. Dist., 37 F.3d 517, 521 (9th Cir.
2 1994); Little v. Purdue Pharma, LP, 227 F.Supp.2d 838, 847 (S.D. Ohio 2002).

3 Defendant's reliance on failure to warn cases precluding claims against physicians and
4 pharmacists is also misplaced. The general rule under California law is that both a manufacturer
5 and a distributor can be strictly liable for injuries caused by a defective product. Maier v. Novartis
6 Pharmaceuticals Corp., 2007 U.S. Dist. Lexis 58984 *7 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 10, 2007); Bostick v. Flex
7 Equipment Co., 147 Cal.App.4th 80, 88 (2007); Anderson v. Owens-Corning Fiberglass Corp., 53
8 Cal.3d 987 (1991). While the California Supreme Court has recognized an exception in strict
9 liability for pharmacists in prescription drug cases, see Murphy v. E.R. Squibb & Sons, Inc., 40
10 Cal.3d 672, 681 (1985), it has not addressed liability in prescription drug cases for distributors and 11 other potential defendants in the "commercial chain." Daly v. General Motors, 20 Cal.3d 725, 739
12 (1978). In fact, Defendant has not cited any case under California law which creates an exception
13 in strict liability for distributors in prescription drug cases. As such, this Court cannot conclude that 14 it is obvious that the general rule of distributor liability does not apply under the allegations in this 15 case. See Maier v. Novartis, 2007 U.S. Dist. Lexis 58984 *12.

16 GSK maintains that Plaintiff's reliance for the principle that a distributor can be liable for 17 failure to warn claims involving prescription drugs are derived from a "single judge in the Central 18 District of California" and "do not represent correct applications of California law." See Def's Opp.
19 at 9:9-12. This is simply not true. GSK fails to acknowledge that a number of courts have 20 concluded that a distributor defendant was not fraudulently joined because a distributor could 21 possibly be liable for failure to warn in prescription drug cases under California law. See Maier v.
22 Novartis, 2007 U.S. Dist. Lexis 58984 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 10, 2007); Martin v. Merck & Co. Inc., 2005
23 U.S. Dist. Lexis 41232 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 17, 2005); Becraft v. Ethicon, 2000 U.S. Dist. Lexis 17725

(N.D. Cal. Nov. 2, 2000); McCabe v. General Foods Corp., 811 F.2d 1336 (9th Cir. 1987); Aaron v. Merck & Co. Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. Lexis 40745 (C.D. Cal. July 26, 2005); Black v. Merck & Co. Inc., 2004 U.S. Dist. Lexis 29860 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 3, 2004).

II. CONCLUSION

GSK has failed in every category necessary to sustain removal. Plaintiff has stated viable causes of action against Defendant McKesson Corporation for the injuries he sustained from his ingestion of Avandia. If anything, GSK has set forth an argument for summary judgment without the benefit of any discovery. That is not what the Plaintiff has to defend when the burden of proof is on Defendant and there is a strong presumption against removal jurisdiction. Therefore, Plaintiff respectfully requests this Court grant the Motion to Remand.
